

Clearing the energy in our homes

by Connie Brisson

Since I was a young girl, I knew that if I changed the furniture around in my bedroom, my life would somehow change – usually for the better. I didn't know how it worked; I just knew that it did.

I was around 32-years-old when I met Skye MacLachlan. A co-worker had recommended her as a tarot reader after I was confounded about a difficult family dynamic, looking for any extra insight. And while Skye did help me immensely with tarot, what captivated me was something else she did – Feng Shui.

Since then, Skye and I have done Feng Shui on a few of my homes and during each one, I've learned more and more, and have been humbled. What I know for sure is that Feng Shui is complicated and I will probably never understand it the way I want to, but that doesn't mean that I ever underestimate its wisdom.

Last year was a very tough year for us. After years of working constantly, my husband was laid off. At first, I was all chipper about it, thinking he would get another job quickly. But month after month, I started to lose faith. We had a big holiday planned in August and as the months went by, I wondered if we should go. But then, at some point, it became apparent it would cost more to cancel it, and so we went. Then, I told myself that when we got home from the holiday, he would get a job offering, but nothing came. At that point, he had not worked for five months.

I see Skye a lot, learning many new things from her constantly, and when I told her about my growing anxiety over our finances (and a really disturbing dream I had just had), she reflected on both.

Then she gave me a Feng Shui cure to clear negative energy from my home. I don't have the space to describe it here because it is detailed, so I will have the procedure on my website so you can follow it if you want. Go to www.mosaicmagazine.ca and click on THIS ISSUE, "Clear Your Home."

Her Feng Shui cure was not a simple process. It involved thoroughly cleaning my house, vacuuming my house and then mopping my house with salt water. It took me three days!

My house is pretty clean but it took me a whole day to vacuum my house (top to bottom) and when my vacuum cleaner (the power hose) stopped working about half way through (so I had to do the rest of the house with the broom hose), I was livid. It wasn't until later, when Skye explained that meant there was something big energetically that the vacuum had picked up (so much so that it actually blocked my power hose from working), that I understood how essential this whole cleansing process really was in order for us to move forward.

The next day I spent hours mopping my entire home, in a very particular way, including all the inlaid rugs in our home. But when I was done, I was ecstatic. I felt like my house was a shrine and I could feel the immensely clear energy that seemed to be bouncing through it.

Then, out of nowhere, I remembered that I needed to clean out the trunk of my vehicle from the last Mosaic Mystic Meeting that had happened almost a month earlier. I went through a container of things I have for the meeting and I found a gift bag there that I had not known about. When I opened it, I gaped.

There was this beautiful chi enhancer Skye had made as a gift for an earlier Mystic Meeting, made all in clear quartz with a beautiful stone cut into Kuan Yin. There was a note attached that told me that (whoever had won this Kuan Yin in an earlier Mystic Meeting) was now gifting it to me because I had commented on how beautiful it was. So thank you, sincerely, to whoever you are, because you did not sign the card and I do not keep track of who wins prizes at our Mystic Meetings.

When I read your note, and had the Kuan Yin chi enhancer in my hand, I got all weepy. It was like Spirit was acknowledging me for doing the hard work of clearing the negative energy from my space (with all the vacuuming and mopping) and then assuring me of good things to come by gifting me so unexpectedly with the more calm and loving energy of Kuan Yin for my home.

I immediately felt it was a sign that our financial trials were over. And indeed they were, as within the next week my husband got a job offer and life became easier once again.

My example is about a job in difficult economic times, but it was such a powerful process that I want to encourage anyone going through any kind of difficulty, to take the time to try this clearing process. When we energetically clear things, we make room (much like decluttering physical things) for new (better) things to come into our lives.

When we clear our spaces (inside and outside of us), we open ourselves to the goodness and abundance of the Universe. Because, pinch me, I really do believe that we can have it all...
